Witness the beauty of polar vistas and blazing auroras

Photographer Anthony Powell spent ten years (and nine winters) capturing Antarctica on camera; from the 24-hour darkness of winter to desolate, stunning polar vistas, blazing auroras, freezing ice storms and the creatures and humans who are based there. This awe inspiring film enables us to experience firsthand the stunning visual wonders and the moving emotional journey that is a year on the ice.

Attention: 'Don't try this at home'

Have you ever wondered what it's like to be struck by lightning or be propelled by hurricane-speed winds? What it's really like inside a burning house? In this fun (and funny!) science series Nigel Latta subjects himself to a variety of 'don't try this at home' experiments to explore some of the more dramatic aspects of fundamental science.

The series consistently won its evening prime time slot with 28% audience share in its first week, averaging 19.5% over the series.
